Juliette Gimon Chairs GFC Board of Directors

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21, 2007 — The Global Fund for Children is pleased to announce that Juliette Gimon, trustee of the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation and a consultant for Google.org, has succeeded Robert D. Stillman as chair of its board of directors.

“It is a privilege for me to have the opportunity to serve as The Global Fund for Children’s new chair. The organization is entering an exciting time of growth, allowing it to have a greater impact in improving the lives of the most vulnerable young members of our global society,” said Gimon.

As a well-respected leader in the philanthropic community, Gimon also serves on the board of The Synergos Institute and the advisory committees of Youth Philanthropy Worldwide, the Global Philanthropy Forum, and VillageReach. She co-founded the Global Philanthropy Forum and worked as vice president of global philanthropic services at JP Morgan Private Bank.

Robert Scully, co-president of Morgan Stanley, was chosen as the board’s vice chair. Isabel Carter Stewart, former executive director of the Chicago Foundation for Women, was elected secretary. Stillman, president of Millbridge Capital Management, became treasurer.

“Bob Stillman has been a great mentor to everyone at The Global Fund for Children,” said Maya Ajmera, president. “I am absolutely thrilled to welcome Juliette as the fourth chair of The Global Fund for Children. She is a dynamic leader in the philanthropic community. I look forward to working with her and the board of directors to achieve our ambitious goals over the next few years.”
